ROLL-A-WHEEL

A solid, heavyweight piece of engineering, the straightforwardly named Roll-a-Wheel is, essentially, a pair of rollers mounted in a bearing frame, that allows you to rotate your bike's wheels at a standstill for cleaning or maintenance.

It's more secure than a paddock stand, if less flexible, and a pretty robust piece of kit.

ARC-ON 3/4 CORDURA JACKET

A well-priced textile jacket from new UK firm Arc-On, this 3/4 length coat features waterproof outer shell, zip-out thermal lining, Knox CE-approved armour in elbows, shoulder and back. As you'd expect from a jacket of this spec there's stacks of pockets and adjustment, and it looks like a solid enough item for the price.

SPIDI RACE VENT GLOVES

These are an update and replacement for Spidi's popular Composite3 glove. Although it's not the top of the range race mitt, it is very popular with some of the Italian companies' sponsored GP riders who prefer it to the more heavily armoured CarboSix.

Part of the reason is down to the feel offered on the fingers and palm as well as the lighter weight. As the name suggests, there's good venting - more than the previous model - but I've crashed in them and they were unscathed.

Not too much Velcro and not too heavy for daily use either. Cow hide, keramide, bits of titanium thread and Clarino allied to Spidi's expertise in the glove department mean you can't go far wrong.

PP TUNING REARSETS

If you're planning to hold on to your Kawasaki ZX-10R (unlike Kenny), then these PP Tuning rearsets should give your feet added flexibility. As tested by Hawk Kawasaki in the BSB championship, land Stiggy Motorsports in WSS1, they're manufactured in Ergal alloy, anodised in black and, of course, are multi adjustable for your feet. Each component is replaceable, so if you bin it you only have to pay for what you wreck. You've even got a choice of peg size, either 80mm or 65mm for those that want the ultimate shave.
